

>

Vacation PackagesFlightsHotelsCars/RailCruisesLast Minute PackagesActivities

Welcome to The Window Seat: a blog for every traveler.

Why The Window Seat?
Because if you're a traveler, it's how you take in the world around you. And because it's the best seat in the house, the one with the most captivating view – and that is precisely what this blog is about. Sharing travel perspectives and experiences.

Subscribe

Subscribe Via RSS
Add to my Yahoo

Subscribe via email

Submit

Archives

June 2007
May 2007
April 2007
March 2007
February 2007
January 2007
December 2006
November 2006
Search archives

Submit

Categories

Trip Tips

Air Travel
Budget Travel
Business Travel
Car Travel
Cruise Travel
Health & Wellness
Hotels & Lodging

« Previous | Main

RIGHT SAID TED

By: Holly Burns

June 26, 2007

The year was 2005. The place was Charleston, South Carolina. The temperature was pushing 80 and I was hot, sweaty, in a rush, and--worst of all--insanely hungry. I needed something to eat. I needed something delicious to eat. I needed something delicious to eat fast. Tall order? Well, it could have been. Until I remembered that a place called Ted's Butcherblock had just opened on the street I was driving down. I pulled over. I parked. I ordered. I swooned.

When I discovered two years later that Ted's had been nominated as one of our Local Secrets, Big Finds in the great state of South Carolina, I was hardly surprised. The place is a foodie's dream, with huge deli-style sandwiches (chicken, pancetta, and avocado? What is this, heaven?), to-die-for gourmet sides, an excellent wine selection, and walls and walls of fancy treats that gastronomes may well have a fainting fit over. (Well, I know I did. What can I say? Cheese has that effect on me.) Every month, the eponymous Ted chooses a region--June, for example, is the Caribbean--and offers featured dishes inspired by its culinary traditions. And as you'd expect from a place named Ted's Butcherblock, the piece de resistance is a full-scale, old-school butcher counter boasting an impressive array of all-natural beef, pork, lamb, veal, poultry game, smoked sausages, salami, bacon, and cold cuts. You don't have to be a carnivore to love Ted's, but it helps.

Of course, there are plenty of other epicurean Edens in our 2007 Local Secrets, Big Finds round-up, so don't feel you have to book your ticket to Charleston just yet (although if you do, make sure you also check out Jack's Cosmic Dogs in Mount Pleasant, another of our readers' picks.) There's the Seven Stars Bakery in Providence, Rhode Island, Tryst in Washington, D.C., and Tartine in San Francisco, all guaranteed to inspire a hearty "mmmmmm." And next time you're hungry, here's some homework: check out the other popular picks on the Local Secrets, Big Finds list and see what you can discover in your neck of the woods. And don't forget to report back!

Amy Ziff

Amy's Posts
Contact Amy
Amy's Column
Amy's Profile

Be a Hero
Go Zero

Read More

Holly Burns

Holly's Posts
Contact Holly
Holly's Profile

Jennifer